To Whom It May Concern:

Through my service at World Wildlife Fund and on the Board of Trustees at the Ford Foundation, I have first hand experience of the importance of the philanthropic and nonprofit work in the United States and beyond. I have had the pleasure of being introduced to a large number of nonprofit organizations, among them The Glimpse Foundation, which has an impressive and innovative approach to addressing the need for cross-cultural understanding among young adults in the United States.

Glimpse Quarterly, The Foundation's print publication, features accounts by young adults of cultural experiences around the world. These accounts are provided by American students and volunteers living, not just traveling, abroad, whose experience allows them to straddle cultural divides. The writing and photography are both compelling and educational. The Foundation's website, www.glimpseabroad.org, combines hundreds of these articles with additional services designed to help students and others connect with one another and share their experiences, thus forging a community of culturally aware young adults.

The Foundation's work, therefore, focuses on building better leaders for tomorrow, leaders who are as familiar and sensitive as possible to the diversity our world has to offer and who seek to move forward through mutual understanding and learning. What the Foundation has accomplished is all the more remarkable given its limited financial support to date. I hope you will give this worthy young organization every consideration.

Sincerely,

Kathryn S. Fuller
